AREVA signs cooperative Research and Development agreement with the US National Cancer Institute for new cancer treatment

Bethesda, Maryland, June 3, 2008 - AREVA, with support from AEC Partners, signed a Cooperative Research and Development Agreement (CRADA) with the National Cancer Institute (NCI) in Bethesda, Md., to develop a new treatment to fight cancer.

As part of the agreement, AREVA will provide medical quality lead-212 to the NCI for the design of a new radiopharmaceutical drug in the near future.

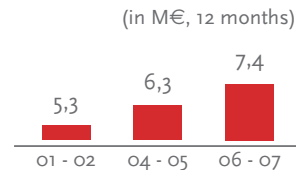

► A team of 28 professionals, primarily composed of experienced Consultants recruited from industry, banking and consulting firms with diverse backgrounds, cultures and nationalities (American, Canadian, French, Irish, Italian, Spanish)

► Including Mergers & Acquisitions advisory practice which is a logical extension of the core business

Lead-212 was until today considered a very scarce radioactive element and is figuring in promising research on treatment for certain cancers for which the current arsenal of therapies has only limited results.

Michael McMurphy, president of AREVA Inc., offered the following comment: "AREVA is very proud to have approved and launched this innovative project several years ago and to contribute to progress in the field of nuclear medicine today by applying our know-how and technology. This important project is the direct result of AREVA's commitment to sustainable development."
